Miss Sue V. Beeson, who will leave the schools of St. Louis on January 26, will reside with relatives in Farmington, Mo. In her retirement from the schools, after fifty years service, the citizens of St. Louis have a great opportunity to show their appreciation of her work and already there is much discussion of some fitting way in which to express it. Miss Beeson is one of the women whom it is a liberal education to know, and to have been associated with her in the relation of pupil and teacher has been an inestimable privilege for the young people of the schools. She is still the exponent of the good old-fashioned ideas of womanhood, which shunned any publicity and made right living the first object of education.—Globe-Democrat.

DEATH OF ROBERT TETLEY.

One of Farmington's Most Prominent And Best Known Business Men
Passes Away.

Mr. Robert Tetley, one of our best, most trusted and highly esteemed business men, died at his home in Farmington at 12:30 a. m., Sunday, January 6, 1907, of diabetes, aged sixty-six years, nine months and eighteen days. Since 1868 he had been in the jewelry and watchmaking business in Farmington, had built up a large and prosperous business, and was closely identified with other interests and enterprises of the town and county. He was a man of fine business judgment, public spirit and strict integrity. His character was beyond reproach, and he possessed an approachable, genial and inviting nature that drew to him friends and held them, for he was ever true and sincere in his friendships to others. No man, perhaps, ever more fully enjoyed the confidence, trust and warm respect of his fellowmen than Robert Tetley, and few men were more deserving of them.

He was a member of long standing of both the Masonic and Odd Fellow fraternities, and to him, perhaps, more than any other member, St. Francois Lodge No. 48 L. O. O. F. owes its success and financial solidity. Since his initiation into the order in 1869, much of the intervening time being financial secretary and a property trustee of the lodge, he watched and directed its interests as carefully and conscientiously as he did his own, and his splendid business judgment and counsel did much to enhance its prosperity.

His family relations were ideal, and to his affectionate devotion his now bereaved wife and sorrowing children and grandchildren responded with a love that was tender and beautiful in its intensity. He will be greatly missed in the large circle of friendship and business associations that knew him so well, but who can measure the deep sorrow in the hearts of his loved ones and the loss that they feel, or what words of human sympathy can assuage their grief? Such consolation as human sympathy affords is theirs in unstinted measure.

Robert Tetley was born in Derby, England, March 12, 1840. He came to America when a boy in 1852, with his parents, who located in Boston, Mass. A couple of years later his parents returned to England, but Robert remained in this country. He worked for awhile in a machine shop in Boston, and then learned the watchmaking trade. After learning his trade he traveled extensively over the country, working at his trade, and in 1868 came to Farmington and engaged in the jewelry and watchmaking business. On January 25th of that year he married Mrs. Ann Heckleman, daughter of the late W. T. Gay of Farmington. To this union six children were born, five sons and one daughter. All except one son who died in infancy are living and have reached the estate of manhood and womanhood. At the time of their marriage his wife had one son, John Henry, who at the request of Mr. Tetley took his name, and between whom and his step-father there has ever existed the love and close relationship of father and son. He leaves besides his bereaved wife, six children, John Hecklemen Tetley, Samuel J. Tetley, George A. Tetley, William R. Tetley, Dr. Clarence A. Tetley and Mrs. Lizzie Klein, wife of J. E. Klein, and thirteen grandchildren; two brothers, Fred I. Tetley of Bonne Terre and Albert Tetley of Derby, England, and two sisters who live in Massachusetts.

The funeral took place from the Presbyterian church Tuesday afternoon, the sermon being conducted by Rev. W. J. Hays, pastor of the M. E. Church, South, at Bonne Terre, and by St. Francois Lodge No. 48 L. O. O. F. at the grave in the Masonic cemetery with the funeral rites of that order. The church was crowded with friends of the deceased, many persons coming from adjoining towns and counties to pay the last sad tribute of respect to one whom they had learned to know and esteem as one of nature's noblemen. Peaceful be his sleep.

Among the many old friends of the late Robert Tetley who were here to attend the funeral were Messrs. Fred J. Bross of St. Louis, F. Rodach of Middlebrook, Tony Rory, Fred Kendall, Jack and Tom Newman of Ironton, W. J. Hobbs and John Hoskins of Bonne Terre, A. J. Parker of Flat River, Wm. Milne and Louis Volmer of Syenite, and others whose names we did not learn.

Miss Beeson's Resignation.

Fifty years ago, then just 15 years of age, Miss Susan V. Beeson began her career as a public school teacher, in which she has won a deserved distinction.

There are teachers and teachers. The boys and girls who have enjoyed the benefit of Miss Beeson's instruction, many of whom are men and women now, doing stately work in the world, unite to say that the subtle personal influence exercised was of more worth to them than the facts of history, literature or art which she communicated. Teachers of this kind are the real leaders. They are the character builders, the helpers who by tact and understanding help the young people to help themselves. They touch the springs of character and arouse the latent powers of the child and youth. The pupil of such a teacher does not merely receive a headful of learning. He is stimulated and grows from within; he becomes a self-developing, self-determining man.

If the value of public service be measured by the manhood and womanhood trained for social duties, we cannot rate too highly the worth of women who, like Miss Beeson, work year after year in obscurity, quietly, without self-assertion, with loving care to elicit and perfect the elements of character which make for robust good and truth.

Such public servants are not without honor, even in their own community, although they are in obscurity. They are remembered in quiet hearts who are grateful to them. But in this case the facts are well enough known to justify the suggestion of a visible testimonial. A Beeson school would commemorate a public fact of no small importance to St. Louis.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The above deserved compliment will be appreciated by the thousands of people who have been under Miss Beeson's influence. Miss Beeson has been granted a leave of absence instead of having her resignation accepted, and in February will come to Farmington to make her home with her niece, Mrs. M. P. Cayce, and she will be a welcome addition to Farmington's social circle.

All were sorry when the time came to bid the college girls farewell. The invited guests were Messrs.
